

Mathematical modeling and numerical simulations on some tire-related problems

Dr. Yue Zhang

Michelin Americas Research and Development Company

November 16, 2011

Tire fabrication involves thermal dynamics as well as fluid and solid mechanics. Unveiling its complexity to improve tire design is highly needed in the automotive industries. In this talk, I will present a number of problems commonly occur and how these challenges are addressed using finite element analysis. Various numerical issues will be discussed in details.